Meet the SWOC Leaders: Networking Event

CIPS

This event aims to educate you on the roles of SWOC leaders, including the President and Directors of Events and Education. The event will also provide networking and idea sharing opportunities for local members. This is your opportunity to meet the decision makers, ask questions, pass along ideas, and meet local individuals who are part of the broader Project Management community. Other questions will be addressed such as: Why should I become a SWOC member? How do I volunteer with SWOC? and How can I host a SWOC event in my organization or local community?

Ottawa improves open data portal

IT World Canada

The federal government has launched an improved version of its Open Data Portal along with a new open government licence for using datasets, calling on software developers and citizens to use more of the information to build applications for fun or profit. "These tools will provide unprecedented access to federal data and the right to reuse it," Treasury Board President Tony Clement said. Treasury Board is responsible for most federal IT initiatives.

Quebec startup offers help to prepare for new anti-spam laws

ITBusiness.ca

A Quebec startup says it has built a communications platform that will help businesses navigate Canada's Anti-Spam Legislation (CASL). For the past two years, Montreal-based startup Taarga has been serving its clients with a platform that helps businesses manage their messages to customers, allowing them to send emails, texts and voice messages to customers all with one user interface. Through a user interface that looks similar to HootSuite or Tweetdeck, about 1,000 companies have been using Taarga's system to reach out to their clients.
