The overlooked CIO problem: Getting the budget dollars they actually wanted

IT World Canada

Don't let the bold, multi-coloured bow tie distract you — Michael Cato is making an important point here. In a recent video clip produced by U.S. nonprofit organization Educause, the CIO of Vassar College takes a traditional view of enterprise IT leadership and flips it on its head. READ MORE

Emergency fix from Microsoft patches font vulnerability

IT World Canada

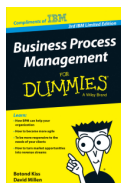

CISOs should be pushing staff who oversee patch management to install an out-of-band Microsoft fix for a critical Windows vulnerability in the way Adobe Type Manager Library handles OpenType fonts. "The vulnerability could allow remote code execution if a user opens a specially crafted document or visits an untrusted webpage that contains embedded OpenType fonts," Microsoft said in a security bulletin. Success lessons, Jean-Luc Martino, CIO, Raiffeisen Banque, winner of the 2015 European CIO of the Year Award

CIPS

When Jean-Luc Martino started at Raiffeisen in 2012 IT was hardly involved in any corporate decision or strategy. In two years time Martino managed to change this profoundly through a number of high-profile projects. READ MORE

June CIPS Volunteer of the Month: Daniel Petley, I.S.P., ITCP

CIPS

CIPS has provided me with an opportunity to meet many people from various disciplines in IT and industry. I really do enjoy meeting new people and making that common connection and see how CIPS could be of better service to the membership and community at large to service the IT community.
