Vendor: Most Android devices can easily be hacked with MMS file

IT World Canada

Allowing staff to use their own devices is a challenge for CISOs as some operating systems aren't as locked down or updated by vendors as often as others. Android is one of them, and Monday brought news another headache involving the mobile OS: Mobile solutions provider Zimperium said it has discovered "scary" vulnerabilities in Android code back to version 2.2, details of which will be presented at the upcoming Black Hat conference. ## Security vendors have to work more closely, urges Cisco

IT World Canada

Cisco Systems has added its voice to the increasing calls for the infosec industry to work more closely to give CISOs the tools to fight cyber threats. The company made the call Tuesday as it released its 2015 Midyear Security Report, which says vendors have to collaborate on offering integrated threat defence architectures that provide visibility, control, intelligence, and context across many solutions.
