Researchers: Browser can cause Active Directory to leak credentials

IT World Canada

Windows 10 has been out barely two weeks and already a vulnerability has been spotted, one that exists in every supported version of the operating system and its browsers that causes computers on an Active Directory domain to leak users' credentials. The problem was outlined at the recent Black Hat security conference and detailed here. READ MORE

CIPS needs your input: 'Creating your ideal technology professional organization: your input shaping the future of CIPS'

CIPS

CIPS, Canada's Association of I.T. New Android vulnerability could give attackers full privileges

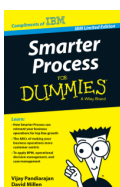

IT World Canada

Another serious vulnerability has been found in Android, one that security researchers at IBM say affects versions 4.3 to 5.1 — on the most recent smart phones — or 55 per cent of the devices on the market. "In a nutshell, advanced attackers could exploit this arbitrary code execution vulnerability to give a malicious app with no privileges the ability to become a 'super app' and help the cybercriminals own the device," the researchers say in a blog.
