The CIO cheat sheet on iPhone 6, Apple Pay and Apple Watch

IT World Canada

If they locked themselves in a meeting or were in transit, IT executives can expect the same question from staff and colleagues for at least the rest of this week: "So what did you think of the whole Apple thing?" As expected, Apple unveiled multiple products and services designed to secure its position in the consumer technology space. Yet much of what Apple creates is increasingly having an impact on what users expect to be able to do at work.

Featured Whitepaper: Networks in 2014: A Conversation with IT Leaders

CIPS

Based on a real-time conversation among senior IT leaders from across Canada, this report looks at how perspectives on "the network" have changed. Often relegated to consideration as a tool or utility, networks are once again top of mind for CIOs — and not from a merely technical perspective.
