CIPS Response — 2014 Immigration Levels CIC Call for stakeholder input

CIPS

CIPS agrees with the current rate of immigration (approximately .8 per cent). While the Information and Communications Technology Council predicts a shortage of ICT workers to the year 2016, those shortages are for certain skills and with an amount of experience.

The hierarchical paradigm meets the collaborative operating system

IT World Canada

After years of work, study and research, my developed inherent quality management principles, among others, advocated a need to: promote professionalism and transparency, and increasingly make quality a mindset, while removing fear and barriers to innovation and collaboration.

August CIPS Volunteer of the Month: Richard Thompson, FCIPS

CIPS

CIPS has provided me with an amazing network of people all across Canada including some who have become strong friends. I learned lots from CIPS conferences and my time on CIPS boards gave me lots of management and governance experience. The work on accreditation both introduced me to academics and the intricacies of their world. It is fair to say that CIPS broadened my horizons and helped me move from a technical approach to a complete approach to business problems and their solution.
