November CIPS Volunteer of the Month: Shaun Herron I.S.P., ITCP

CIPS

I joined CIPS to solidify my career as a Professional in the Information Technology field. It was important for me to obtain my I.S.P. and become a member of a professional organization specific to IT. CIPS has provided me with a number of benefits including professional development opportunities, volunteer opportunities, and networking. READ MORE

CIPS SK Regina Dec. 8 Luncheon: 'Creative Citizenship and its impact on the future'

CIPS

This talk will identify various methods that Creative Technology students and researchers at the University of Regina are engaging with data driven culture and identify how working within this industry is affecting change and building community across local and national society. "Riding Through Walls" is a new research-creation project in — duration performance in physical computing; a mash-up of terms drawn from fine art and computer science that express the hybrid space that the work sits within. Survey: IT workers lack faith about digital transformation

IT World Canada

There's lots of talk about digital transformation within organization to respond to customer demand and leverage new technologies such as cloud computing, but is that transformation actually happening? The answer is no, at least according to a global survey of IT professionals released recently as part of the Business Performance Innovation (BPI) Network's "Transform to Better Perform" knowledge transfer initiative.
